6. Online transactions and orders

6.1. Ordering, offers and acceptance and creation of a contract

You may submit an offer to purchase particular goods or services offered or advertised by us on this website or elsewhere. Such an offer, whether done by submitting an order form, web enquiry or other statement to similar effect does not create a binding contract between us and you.

On receipt of your order we will send you confirmation that we have received your order, or contact you at the details given to discuss your order, or confirm acceptance of your order and conclusion of the contract. For orders placed by telephone by you, this will generally form acceptance of order.

Where it is stated that any order involves an obligation to pay, you will not be deemed to have submitted an order where the payment is not authorised.

An order may not be accepted by us for the following reasons (this list is not exhaustive):

- We do not have the products or goods in stock
- We are unable for organisational reasons to fulfil the order or provide the services
- Due to a pricing or product/service description error
- Due to legal, postal or other restrictions meaning that you are not eligible to order the selected products or services
- Due to a failure to obtain authorisation for any payment

Your order will be accepted and the contract concluded when we have sent you written confirmation that we have accepted your order, or we have dispatched the selected goods to you, or when we have confirmed that we are able to supply the products or services ordered and have received full or part payment as required and notified to you.

The contract will be concluded in English.

Any concluded contract will be filed at the offices of Starweld Engineering Ltd
